

Please note:

As of March 2015, the morning-after pill is available in German pharmacies without a prescription.

For women under 20 years of age, health insurance companies will cover the cost of the morning-after pill provided a prescription is produced. For women aged 18 and older, a prescription charge of 5 euros applies if a prescription is presented to the pharmacy.

All others must pay to obtain the morning-after pill in the pharmacy following a consultation.

Please note:

As of March 2015, the morning-after pill is available in German pharmacies without a prescription.

For women under 20 years of age, health insurance companies will cover the cost of the morning-after pill provided a prescription is produced. For women aged 18 and older, a prescription charge of 5 euros applies if a prescription is presented to the pharmacy.

All others must pay to obtain the morning-after pill in the pharmacy following a consultation.

Please note:

As of March 2015, the morning-after pill is available in German pharmacies without a prescription.

For women under 20 years of age, health insurance companies will cover the cost of the morning-after pill provided a prescription is produced. For women aged 18 and older, a prescription charge of 5 euros applies if a prescription is presented to the pharmacy.

All others must pay to obtain the morning-after pill in the pharmacy following a consultation.

Please note:

As of March 2015, the morning-after pill is available in German pharmacies without a prescription.

For women under 20 years of age, health insurance companies will cover the cost of the morning-after pill provided a prescription is produced. For women aged 18 and older, a prescription charge of 5 euros applies if a prescription is presented to the pharmacy.

All others must pay to obtain the morning-after pill in the pharmacy following a consultation.

Please note:

As of March 2015, the morning-after pill is available in German pharmacies without a prescription.

For women under 20 years of age, health insurance companies will cover the cost of the morning-after pill provided a prescription is produced. For women aged 18 and older, a prescription charge of 5 euros applies if a prescription is presented to the pharmacy.

All others must pay to obtain the morning-after pill in the pharmacy following a consultation.

Please note:

As of March 2015, the morning-after pill is available in German pharmacies without a prescription.

For women under 20 years of age, health insurance companies will cover the cost of the morning-after pill provided a prescription is produced. For women aged 18 and older, a prescription charge of 5 euros applies if a prescription is presented to the pharmacy.

All others must pay to obtain the morning-after pill in the pharmacy following a consultation.

